

Louisiana Guidelines: Drafting Work Notes for Patients Who Need Accommodations for Pregnancy, Childbirth, or a Related Medical Condition

*These guidelines apply only in Louisiana.

Visit Pregnant@Work (www.pregnantatwork.org) for other states.

Attached as Appendix A is a sample work note that maximizes the likelihood that your patient will receive the accommodation she needs to continue working.

Louisiana law requires employers with 25 or more employees:

- To temporarily transfer a pregnant employee to a less strenuous or hazardous position based on the advice of her physician, where a position exists and is open, and where the pregnant woman is qualified to perform the job.
- To provide leave to a woman who is disabled on account of pregnancy, childbirth, or a related medical condition, during the period of her disability, but for no more than 4 months.

Federal and state law may also require employers to provide a pregnant woman accommodations other than transfer or leave, so she can continue working safely.

Health care providers can play an important role in enabling patients to receive the accommodations they need to keep their jobs. In most cases, the goal is to write a note that will assist your patient to receive the accommodation she needs to continue working and earning an income for the family she supports. Before you recommend that a patient take leave or work a reduced schedule, see “Recommending leave or a reduced work schedule? Proceed with Caution,” under #6 below.

An effective pregnancy accommodation work note includes 7 components:

- 1. State that your patient is pregnant. This triggers the protections of the federal and state laws that may require your patient’s employer to accommodate her.

What if my patient does not want to reveal her pregnancy to her employer? That is her choice, but she may be less likely to receive the accommodation she needs.

- 2. Identify your patient’s medical condition(s) and the bodily system(s) impaired. Identifying this information in the note will demonstrate to your patient’s employer that she has an impairment that constitutes a disability, and therefore is entitled to an accommodation under the law.

See Appendix C for a list of medical conditions commonly associated with pregnancy. Examples include:

- Gestational Diabetes, an impairment of the endocrine system
- Sciatica/severe back pain, an impairment of the musculoskeletal system
- Migraine headaches, an impairment of the cardiovascular and nervous systems
- Recurrent urinary tract infections, an impairment of the genitourinary system

Tip: It is useful to identify a specific medical diagnosis and the bodily system it impairs, if possible. For example, state that your patient has been diagnosed with “hyperemesis gravidarum, an impairment of the digestive and reproductive systems,” instead of simply saying she has “morning sickness.”

What if my patient does not have an identifiable medical condition or does not want to disclose it for privacy reasons? If your patient does not provide documentation to her employer that she has a specific impairment, she may not be entitled to an accommodation under the Americans with Disabilities Act or Louisiana’s pregnancy disability leave law. Patients who do not disclose their medical condition may still be entitled to protection under other laws, including receiving a temporary transfer to a less hazardous or strenuous position, if such a position is open and your patient is qualified for it. Because a temporary transfer may not be available or your patient may need an accommodation other than a transfer, it is recommended that you identify an existing medical condition in your note, to increase the likelihood that your patient will be accommodated. However, if this is not possible, skip this step and step #3, and continue to #4 below. A sample work note that does not disclose any medical condition is attached as Appendix B.

3. Identify major life activities that are substantially limited by your patient’s medical condition. This will demonstrate for the employer that your patient has an impairment covered by federal and state accommodation laws. Include this component in the note only if you have identified a medical condition (#2 above).

E.g., You may write: “XYZ medical condition substantially limits patient’s ability to [eat, sleep, bend, reach, stand, walk, lift, communicate, concentrate, think, perform manual tasks, care for herself, work, or any other life activity impaired].”

FYI: “Substantially limits” means substantially limits as compared to the rest of the general population, before any ameliorative actions have been taken to treat the condition. Under the law, “substantially limits” is construed broadly.

4. Precisely identify your patient’s limitation(s). Identify exactly what your patient requires to work safely. Do not impose limitations that are not medically necessary, because if there is no accommodation available, your patient could be sent out on leave.

Examples of specific, clear limitations include:

- Is unable to stand for more than one hour without fifteen minutes of sitting
- Must eat snacks every two or three hours throughout the day
- May not lift more than 50 pounds more than three times per day
- Must consume water approximately every 10 minutes throughout the day
- May not be exposed to [specific toxin]
- May not be put at risk of being kicked in the stomach
- May not climb ladders

CAUTION: Avoid recommending limitations that are too vague or overly broad. For example, DO NOT recommend:

- “Light duty.” Instead, specify the maximum number of pounds the patient can safely lift, that she can only be on her feet X amount without a rest break, etc.
- “No stress.” This typically will cause a patient to lose her job. What employer can guarantee a stress-free job?
- “No physical activity.” Be more specific; few jobs require no physical activity at all.

5. Affirmatively state that your patient is able to continue working with a reasonable accommodation. Omit this step if you recommend full-time leave.

6. Recommend reasonable accommodation(s). A health care provider need not identify a reasonable accommodation to address the patient’s known limitation, but patients typically have a better chance of receiving the accommodations they need if their health care provider identifies it.

- A reasonable accommodation is any change in the work environment or in the way a job is customarily done that would enable the pregnant employee to satisfactorily perform the essential duties of her job, without imposing an undue difficulty or expense on her employer. Speak with your patient about what may be possible at her workplace.
- What if you don’t know enough about your patient’s workplace to recommend an accommodation? So long as you clearly explain the patient’s known limitations (#4 above), you are not required to recommend a specific accommodation. If you do recommend an accommodation, it is important to be as specific and clear as possible in making your recommendation.
- Recommending Leave or a reduced work schedule? Proceed with Caution. Before recommending that your patient take leave, you should discuss with her other accommodations that will allow her to continue working. Louisiana law requires employers to give women disabled by pregnancy leave from work during the period of their disability, but for no longer than 4 months. A woman whose health care provider recommends a reduced schedule (e.g., part time work) typically uses up her leave on a pro rata basis. Before deciding on leave, you and your patient should consider:
 - Taking Leave Will Likely Affect Your Patient’s Income because most leave is unpaid.
 - The requirement that employers provide leave for up to 4 months applies only to employers with 25 or more employees and to women who are disabled by pregnancy. Other women may be entitled to leave under other laws or employer policies, but such leave is usually limited. If your patient's leave runs out before your patient is ready to come back to work, she may lose her job as a result.

- If your patient is fired for asking for or taking pregnancy leave, advise her to call WorkLife Law's legal hotline (see number below) for information.

*Appendix C to this document is a chart of typical pregnancy-related conditions and accommodations that may be appropriate in addressing them.

Examples of reasonable accommodations include:

- Acquisition of equipment for sitting
- More frequent or longer breaks
- Ability to periodically eat or drink water
- Periodic rest
- Time off for medical appointments
- Assistance with lifting or other manual labor
- Temporarily modified work duties
- Modified work schedules or telecommuting
- Temporary transfer to less hazardous or strenuous position

- 7. Provide expected duration of impairment and limitation. Inform the employer how long you expect the limitation to last. Say, for example, that the limitation began on the date of the letter and is expected to last for the duration of your patient's pregnancy, until she gives birth on her approximate due date. If the end date of the accommodation is uncertain, you may list a date by which you will have reevaluated your patient – the date can be extended or changed in the future.

Have Questions? Health care providers may contact the Center for WorkLife Law at (415)-565-4640. Pregnant women may contact WorkLife Law's free legal hotline at hotline@worklifelaw.org or (415)-703-8276.
