

Utah Guidelines for Drafting Work Accommodation Notes for Pregnant and Postpartum Patients

*These guidelines apply only in Utah.

Visit the Pregnant@Work website (www.pregnantatwork.org) for other states.

ACOG's Committee Opinion on Employment Considerations (#733) recommends that obstetric care providers assist their patients to obtain accommodations by writing appropriate notes to employers following these state-specific guidelines.

Attached as Appendix A is a sample work note that satisfies the requirements under Utah law.

Utah law¹ requires employers of 15 or more employees to provide:

- reasonable accommodations, upon request, for an employee related to pregnancy, childbirth, breastfeeding, or related conditions;
- unless the employer demonstrates that the accommodation would create an undue hardship on the employer's operations.

Health care providers can play an important role in enabling patients to receive the accommodations they need to keep their jobs during pregnancy and following childbirth.

In most cases, the goal is to write a note that will assist your patient to receive the accommodation she needs to continue working and earning an income for the family she supports. Before you recommend that a pregnant patient take leave or adopt a reduced schedule, see "Caution: Recommending leave" under #4 below.

For patients requiring lactation accommodations (e.g., breaks and space for pumping breast milk), review our separate guidelines for writing effective lactation accommodation notes at the Pregnant@Work website's page for Helping Patients Seek Breastfeeding Accommodations.

An effective pregnancy or postpartum accommodation work note has five components:

- 1. State that your patient is pregnant or postpartum and that an accommodation is medically advisable. This triggers the protections of the federal and Utah laws that may require your patient's employer to accommodate her.

What if my patient does not want to reveal her pregnancy to her employer? That is her choice, but she may be less likely to receive the accommodation she needs.

- 2. Precisely identify your patient's limitation(s). Identify exactly what your patient requires to work safely. Do not impose limitations that are not necessary, because if there is no accommodation available, your patient could be sent out on leave.

Examples of specific, clear limitations include:

- Is unable to stand for more than one hour without fifteen minutes of sitting
- Must eat snacks every two or three hours throughout the day

¹ Utah Code §§ 34-49-202, 34A-5-102, 106.

- May not lift more than 50 pounds more than three times per day
- Must consume water approximately every 10 minutes throughout the day
- May not be exposed to [specific toxin]
- May not be put at risk of being kicked in the stomach
- May not climb ladders

CAUTION: Avoid recommending limitations that are too vague or overly broad. For example, DO NOT recommend:

- “Light duty.” Instead, specify the maximum number of pounds the patient can safely lift, that she can only be on her feet X amount without a rest break, etc.
- “No stress.” This typically will cause a patient to lose her job. What employer can guarantee a stress-free job?
- “No physical activity.” Be more specific; few jobs require no physical activity at all.

3. Affirmatively state that your patient is able to continue working with a reasonable accommodation. Under Utah law, an employer may not require that a pregnant or postpartum woman terminate employment if another reasonable accommodation can be provided. Omit this step if you are recommending full-time leave.

4. Recommend reasonable accommodation(s). Patients typically have a better chance of receiving the accommodations they need if their health care provider identifies them. Under Utah law, an employer may require an employee to provide a certification from her health care provider concerning the medical advisability of a reasonable accommodation, except for when the employee’s request is for more frequent restroom, food, or water breaks.

- A reasonable accommodation is any change in the work environment or in the way a job is customarily done that would address the employee’s limitations related to pregnancy, childbirth, breastfeeding, or a related condition, without imposing an undue difficulty or expense on her employer. Speak with your patient about what may be possible at her workplace.
- What if you don’t know enough about your patient’s workplace to recommend an accommodation? So long as you clearly explain the patient’s known limitations (#2 above), and explain that a reasonable accommodation is medically advisable, you are not required to recommend a specific accommodation. If you do recommend an accommodation, it is important to be as specific and clear as possible in making your recommendation.
- Caution: Recommending leave. Your patient should consider two factors before taking leave. First, leave is often unpaid. Second, most employees have limited leave time, or no leave time. If your patient exhausts her leave before she is able to return to work, she may be fired.
 - During Pregnancy: Before recommending that your patient take leave during pregnancy, consider that if she goes out early in her pregnancy, she may exhaust her leave and have none available during the final weeks of pregnancy and following childbirth. You should discuss with your patient other accommodations that will allow her to continue working.

- Postpartum: Your patient may be entitled to take leave following childbirth for recovery and bonding with her newborn. She may also be entitled to take leave for postpartum pregnancy-related conditions (e.g., depression or anxiety). To learn about the laws that may provide your patient a right to take leave postpartum, visit the Babygate website.
- Caution: Recommending a reduced schedule: A woman whose health care provider recommends a reduced schedule (e.g., part time work) typically uses up her leave on a pro rata basis.
- If your patient is fired for taking leave or unsure of her leave eligibility, advise her to contact WorkLife Law’s free legal hotline without delay (see below).

Appendix B to this document is a chart of typical pregnancy-related conditions and accommodations that may be appropriate in addressing them.

Examples of reasonable accommodations include:

- Acquisition of equipment for sitting
- More frequent or longer breaks
- Ability to periodically eat or drink water
- Periodic rest
- Time off for medical appointments
- Assistance with lifting or other manual labor
- Temporary modified work duties
- Modified work schedules or telecommuting

5. Provide the date when the accommodation became medically advisable and its expected duration. Inform the employer how long you expect the limitation to last. Say, for example, that the limitation began on the date of the letter and is expected to last for the duration of your patient’s pregnancy, until she gives birth on her approximate due date. If the end date of the accommodation is uncertain, you may choose to list a date by which you will have reevaluated your patient – the date can be extended or changed in the future. If you say nothing at all about when a patient on leave can return to work, she may end up losing her job as a result.
